

A delayed crew change delays the vessel.

Marine companies run on rotations. Crew changes, port visits, supplier mobilisations, flag state inspections — the travel calendar never pauses, and a missed booking doesn't stay a travel problem for long. It becomes an operational one. Most marine operators manage this through specialist agents who know the routes but can't give real-time visibility, vessel-level cost coding, or a human on the phone at 2am when a connection is missed in Abu Dhabi.

WHAT IT'S COSTING YOU

-  No vessel-level cost tracking travel spend isn't tagged to asset, so VOC reporting is always an estimate
-  Emergency crew travel at panic rates
 no protocol in place means no cost control when it matters most
-  Duty of care blind spots
 no real-time visibility of where shore-based staff are at any given moment
-  Crew policy managed manually
 rank entitlements, CEA compliance, multi-nationality documentation outside the system

WHAT CHANGES WITH BIZAWAY

-  Vessel-coded booking
 Every booking tagged to vessel, voyage, or project from day one. VOC reporting becomes accurate. Charter negotiations get stronger data behind them.
-  Crew rotation management
 Set entitlements by rank. Every booking checks automatically against CEA policy. Multi-flag, multi-nationality rotations managed in one platform.
-  24/7 TED Support
 Chief engineer misses his connection at 2am en route to Fujairah. TED rebooks, contacts the vessel agent, and keeps the rotation on schedule.
-  Emergency crew protocols
 Build your emergency response into BizAway before you need it — medical evacuations, urgent crew replacements, last-minute mobilisations.
-  Travel risk & duty of care
 Real-time map of every shore-based traveller. In a region where geopolitical risk is real, crew location visibility is a compliance requirement.
